MASTER GARDNERS

Kent County Master Gardeners will be giving away seeds at the 55+ Expo

Master Gardeners are volunteers for the Delaware Cooperative Extension System of Delaware State University and University of Delaware. They complete an intensive and comprehensive 16-week training designed to prepare Master Gardener candidates for the volunteer phase of the program. Upon completion of the training program, Master Gardeners are expected to donate 45 hours of their time to Cooperative Extension. Volunteer time is spent solving problems, educating and advising the gardening public of Delaware.

The Information Table Program mission is to assist Delaware residents with their home, lawn and garden concerns. The Table Program often takes place as part of an event/fair/festival sponsored by a community organization or at a garden center. It is a face-to-face exchange of gardening-related information. They draw upon Extension literature and the knowledge or experience of the Master Gardeners present that are proficient in two or three areas.

If your garden center is interested in inviting the Information Table to your facility, obtaining more information on becoming a Master Gardener, or to utilize their hotline for horticulture questions, call your local Cooperative Extension Offices or the hotline at 302-730-4000 between 9am and Noon.

Master Gardener training makes good gardeners into good garden educators! Stop by their booth to receive more gardening information as well as the seeds while their supply lasts.
